

Technology will assist military planners and activities

by Fran Crumb, Information Directorate

ROME, N.Y. — The Air Force Research Laboratory Information Directorate has awarded a $3,796,200 contract to ISX Corp. of Westlake Village, Calif., for development of software to enhance the operational use of networked systems.

The three-year contract, “Tools for Information Discovery and Management for the Warfighter,” is funded by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) of Arlington, Va.

“ISX will develop information, discovery and management technology to assist military planners and other operational activities,” said Richard C. Metzger, program manager in the directorate’s Information Technology Division. @